This summer our photography business had a significant server crash resulting in an inability to access all of our client's images. This was a serious problem overall but especially as we were in the midst of one of our busiest seasons, with tight deadlines and had many orders to immediately fill.

Unfortunately the computer tech we first called seemingly caused more damage than help.

We eventually found our way to Data Analyzers. Thank goodness.

They were great about taking our calls and keeping us informed along the way. It was not an easy process, or a quick process and it was in fact a costly process, however almost all of our data and images were recovered by the staff at Data Analyzers.

We are very thankful for the work done by them.
